

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF MICHIGAN
NORTHERN DIVISION

MAN LEWIS, JR.,

Plaintiff,

v.

Case No. 2:04-cv-224
HON. ROBERT HOLMES BELL

BILL ELLIOT, et al.,

Defendants.

REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION

Plaintiff Man Lewis, Jr., an inmate confined at the Marquette Branch Prison filed this pro se civil rights action pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against Quarter Master Bill Elliot and Quarter Master Shawn Aston who are employed at the Hiawatha Correctional Facility.

Plaintiff's complaint alleges that on June 6, 2003, he had four pairs of trousers. Three packed with his state-issued items and one pair that he was wearing. Plaintiff asserts that he asked for two replacement pairs, but was told that there were no available pants in his size. Plaintiff kept his pants, but turned in one pair on January 16, 2004. Plaintiff was sent a pair of used trousers that were the wrong size. As a result, plaintiff filed a complaint.

Plaintiff alleges that he was retaliated against for filing the complaint because defendant Elliot shared the information with an inmate employee. The inmate employee told plaintiff, "My boss Quarter Master said: 'you can't wear that shit, but you can fuck little babies.'" Plaintiff was convicted of criminal sexual conduct with an individual less than 13 years old. Plaintiff claims that this statement was made with deliberate indifference and reckless disregard to his safety.

Plaintiff asserts that he filed a grievance which was investigated by defendant Aston. Plaintiff was escorted by defendant Aston inside the building where defendant Elliot was present. Plaintiff alleges that defendant Elliot “maliciously intervened in the grievance investigation,” in violation of policy. Plaintiff claims that he accused both defendants of retaliating against him by misusing the grievance investigatory procedures. Plaintiff alleges that he was given an “erroneous” order to take the pants or receive a misconduct ticket. Plaintiff was given a misconduct ticket for disobeying a direct order and for insolence. The charge of disobeying a direct order was upheld, but the charge for insolence was dismissed. Plaintiff alleges that defendants engaged in a civil conspiracy and retaliated against him. Plaintiff further alleges that defendants violated his equal protection rights.

Presently before the Court is Defendants’ Motion to Dismiss, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), and/or Motion for Summary Judgment, pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 56. Plaintiff has filed a response and the matter is ready for decision. Because both sides have asked that the Court consider evidentiary materials beyond the pleadings, the standards applicable to summary judgment apply. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b).

Summary judgment is appropriate only if the moving party establishes that there is no genuine issue of material fact for trial and that he is entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c); Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322-323 (1986). If the movant carries the burden of showing there is an absence of evidence to support a claim or defense, then the party opposing the motion must demonstrate by affidavits, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, that there is a genuine issue of material fact for trial. Id. at 324-25. The nonmoving party cannot rest on its pleadings but must present “specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue for trial.” Id. at 324 (quoting Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(e)). The evidence must be viewed in the light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52 (1986). Thus, any direct evidence offered by the plaintiff in response to a summary judgment motion must be accepted as true. Muhammad v. Close, 379 F.3d 413, 416 (6th Cir. 2004) (citing Adams v. Metiva, 31 F.3d 375, 382 (6th Cir. 1994)). However, a mere scintilla of evidence in support of the nonmovant’s position will be insufficient. Anderson, 477 U.S. at 251-52. Ultimately, the court must determine whether there is sufficient “evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the plaintiff.” Id. at 252. See also Leahy v. Trans Jones, Inc., 996 F.2d 136, 139 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit, in presence of other evidence to the contrary, failed to present genuine issue of fact); cf. Moore, Owen, Thomas & Co. v. Coffey, 992 F.2d 1439, 1448 (6th Cir. 1993) (single affidavit concerning state of mind created factual issue).

Plaintiff alleges that defendants retaliated against him. Retaliation based upon a prisoner’s exercise of his or her constitutional rights violates the Constitution. See Thaddeus-X v. Blatter, 175 F.3d 378, 394 *1037 (6th Cir.1999) (en banc). In order to set forth a First Amendment retaliation claim, a plaintiff must establish that: (1) he was engaged in protected conduct; (2) an adverse action was taken against him that would deter a person of ordinary firmness from engaging in that conduct; and (3) the adverse action was motivated, in least in part, by the protected conduct. Thaddeus-X, 175 F.3d at 394. Moreover, Plaintiff must be able to prove that the exercise of the protected right was a substantial or motivating factor in the defendant’s alleged retaliatory conduct. See Smith v. Campbell, 250 F.3d 1032, 1037 (6th Cir. 2001) (citing Mount Healthy City Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, 429 U.S. 274, 287 (1977)).

In the opinion of the undersigned, plaintiff cannot support his retaliation claim. Plaintiff was issued a misconduct ticket for disobeying a direct order and insolence when defendant Elliot ordered plaintiff to take state issued pants and plaintiff allegedly made an inappropriate comment. Plaintiff was found guilty of disobeying the order but was found not guilty of the insolence charge because of inconsistent statements by the officers who were present during the alleged act.

The misconduct ticket issued by defendant Elliot was justified based upon plaintiff's actions. Plaintiff may not have liked the order that he was given, but he was in no position to disobey the order or make any derogatory comment regarding the order. Moreover, plaintiff cannot show that the interview regarding plaintiff's grievance filing was an act of retaliation. Defendants had the right to try and resolve the grievance and certainly had the right to order plaintiff to take the trousers that were issued.

Similarly, plaintiff cannot support an equal protection claim. Plaintiff claims that defendants have treated white prisoners differently by not requiring them to take used pants, not retaliating against them for using the grievance system and not issuing misconduct tickets against them. To establish a violation of the Equal Protection Clause, a prison inmate must prove that a discriminatory intent or purpose against a disfavored class or excluded group was a factor in an action taken by prison officials. See McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279 (1987); Heckler v. Mathews, 465 U.S. 728 (1984); Village of Arlington Heights v. Metropolitan Housing Development Corporation, 429 U.S. 252, 265 (1977). The typical case involves allegations that state officials have discriminated on the basis of race or gender. Plaintiff alleges that he was treated differently than white prisoners. However, defendants have established that white prisoners, including those who submitted affidavits in support of plaintiff's claims, have been issued used clothing. Plaintiff cannot show that defendants' actions were in any way based upon plaintiff's race.

Plaintiff alleges that defendants engaged in a conspiracy against him after he complained about receiving used trousers that were too big for him. "A civil conspiracy is an agreement between two or more persons to injure another by unlawful action." Moore v. City of Paducah, 890 F.2d 831, 834 (6th Cir. 1989); Hooks v. Hooks, 771 F.2d 935, 943-944 (6th Cir. 1985). In order to prove a civil conspiracy, a plaintiff must show that there was a single plan, that the coconspirators shared in the objective of the conspiracy, and that an overt act was committed in furtherance of the conspiracy. Moore, 890 F.2d at 834; Hooks, 771 F.2d at 943-944. In this case, plaintiff failed to allege any facts indicating that defendants shared a single plan. Therefore, plaintiff's claim of conspiracy, in the opinion of the undersigned, is without merit.

Defendants argue that they are entitled to defense of qualified immunity. Government officials, performing discretionary functions, generally are shielded from liability for civil damages insofar as their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known. Dietrich v. Burrows, 167 F.3d 1007, 1012 (6th Cir. 1999); Turner v. Scott, 119 F.3d 425, 429 (6th Cir. 1997); Noble v. Schmitt, 87 F.3d 157, 160 (6th Cir. 1996); Harlow v. Fitzgerald, 457 U.S. 800, 818 (1982). An "objective reasonableness" test is used to determine whether the official could reasonably have believed his conduct was lawful. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012; Anderson v. Creighton, 483 U.S. 635, 641 (1987).

"The procedure for evaluating claims of qualified immunity is tripartite: First, we determine whether a constitutional violation occurred; second, we determine whether the right that was violated was a clearly established right of which a reasonable person would have known; finally, we determine whether the plaintiff has alleged sufficient facts, and supported the allegations by sufficient evidence, to indicate that what the official allegedly did was objectively unreasonable in light of the clearly established constitutional rights.” Williams v. Mehra, 186 F.3d 685, 690 (6th Cir. 1999).

When determining whether a right is clearly established, this court must look first to decisions of the United States Supreme Court, then to decisions of the Sixth Circuit and to other courts within this Circuit, and finally to decisions of other circuits. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012. An official action is not necessarily protected by qualified immunity merely because the very action in question has not previously been held to be unlawful. Rather, in light of pre-existing law, the unlawfulness of the official’s conduct must be apparent. Dietrich, 167 F.3d at 1012; Wegener v. City of Covington, 933 F.2d 390, 392 (6th Cir. 1991).

When making a qualified immunity analysis, the facts must be interpreted in the light most favorable to the plaintiff. Part of the analysis is to determine whether there are any genuinely disputed questions of material fact. Kain v. Nesbitt, 156 F.3d 669, 672 (6th Cir. 1998). Where there is a genuinely disputed question of fact, it is for the trier of fact to resolve, not the judge. “This would be true notwithstanding that the trial judge found the [defendant] officer to be more credible than the plaintiff because it is not for the court to make credibility determinations at this stage of the proceeding.” Id.

The operation of the qualified immunity standard depends substantially upon the level of generality at which the relevant legal rule is to be identified.

The contours of the right must be sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violates that right. This is not to say that an official action is protected by qualified immunity unless the very action in question has previously been held unlawful, but it is to say that in light of the preexisting law the unlawfulness must be apparent.

Anderson, 483 U.S. at 639-40. See also Durham v. Nu'Man, 97 F.3d 862, 866 (6th Cir. 1996), cert. denied, 520 U.S. 1157 (1997).

The Sixth Circuit has observed:

A right is not considered clearly established unless it has been authoritatively decided by the United States Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, or the highest court of the state in which the alleged constitutional violation occurred.

Durham, 97 F.3d at 866 (citing Robinson v. Bibb, 840 F.2d 349, 351 (6th Cir. 1988)).

Thus, qualified immunity is not triggered only where the very action in question was previously held unlawful. Anderson, 483 U.S. at 639-40. Rather, the test is whether the contours of the right were sufficiently clear that a reasonable official would understand that what he is doing violated plaintiff's federal rights. Id.

Furthermore, a defendant need not actively participate in unlawful conduct in order to be liable under Section 1983. Rather, a defendant may be liable where he has a duty to protect a plaintiff and fails to comply with this duty. Durham, 97 F.3d at 866-868 (holding that a nurse and a security guard at a state hospital may be liable under Section 1983 where they do not take action to prevent a patient from being beaten). See also McHenry v. Chadwick, 896 F.2d 184 (6th Cir. 1990)(a correctional officer who observes an unlawful beating may be liable under Section 1983 even though he did not actively participate in the beating), and Bruner v. Dunaway, 684 F.2d 422 (6th Cir. 1982), cert. denied sub nom, Bates v. Bruner, 459 U.S. 1171 (1983)(police officers who stood by and observed an unlawful beating by fellow officers could be held liable under Section 1983).

When faced with a qualified immunity defense, the court must first determine whether or not the plaintiff has stated a claim upon which relief can be granted. Siebert v. Gilley, 500 U.S. 226, 232 (1991); Turner, 119 F.3d at 429. If the court answers that question in the affirmative, the court goes on to determine whether or not the right allegedly violated was clearly established. Turner, 119 F.3d at 429. These are both purely legal questions. The immunity issue should not be resolved if there are factual disputes on which the issue of immunity turns such that it cannot be determined before trial whether the defendants' conduct violated clearly established rights. Hall v. Shipley, 932 F.2d 1147, 1154 (6th Cir. 1991). Defendants have established that they did not violate any of plaintiff's constitutional rights. Therefore, it is the opinion of the undersigned that defendants are entitled to the defense of qualified immunity.

Accordingly, it is recommended that Defendants' Motion for Dismissal and/or Summary Judgment (Docket #34) be granted and that this case be dismissed in its entirety.

Further, if the court adopts this recommendation the court should decide that an appeal of this action would not be in good faith within the meaning of 28 U.S.C. § 1915(a)(3). See McGore v. Wigglesworth, 114 F.3d 601, 611 (6th Cir. 1997). For the same reasons that the court grants defendants' motion for summary judgment, the court can discern no good-faith basis for an appeal. It is recommended that should the plaintiff appeal this decision, the court assess the $255 appellate filing fee pursuant to § 1915(b)(1), see McGore, 114 F.3d at 610-11, unless plaintiff is barred from proceeding in forma pauperis, e.g., by the "three-strikes" rule of § 1915(g). If he is barred, he should be required to pay the $255 appellate filing fee in one lump sum.

NOTICE TO PARTIES: Objections to this Report and Recommendation must be served on opposing parties and filed with the Clerk of the Court within ten (10) days of receipt of this Report and Recommendation. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(C); Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(b); W.D. Mich. LCivR 72.3(b). Failure to file timely objections constitutes a waiver of any further right to appeal. United States v. Walters, 638 F.2d 947 (6th Cir. 1981). See also Thomas v. Arn, 474 U.S. 140 (1985).
